

2015 year in review.

As 2016 approaches, British Gymnastics is marking the New Year having achieved a number of significant milestones during 2015. Indeed, come the twelfth strike of Big Ben on the 31st December, British Gymnastics will have celebrated one of its most successful and historic years to date and all eyes will now be on the year ahead, not least of all on the much-anticipated Rio 2016 Olympic Games.

In 2015, British Gymnastics achieved:

- 26 World and European medals, including (not limited to);
 - historic first men's artistic World Gymnastics Championships gold medal (Max Whitlock on the pommel horse),
 - historic first men's artistic team World Gymnastics Championships silver medal,
 - historic first women's artistic team World Gymnastics Championships bronze medal,
 - Best ever medal haul at the Artistic European Championships (2 gold, 4 silver and 2 bronze),
 - Five medals at the inaugural European Games in Baku (bronzes);
 - Four medals at the Trampoline, Tumbling and Double Mini-Trampoline World Championships (silvers),
 - Four medals at the Acrobatic Gymnastics European Championships (3 silver, 1 bronze).

- A record-breaking year when it came to British Gymnastics membership numbers across the UK, with 300,000 people now British Gymnastics members;
- Qualification of full men's and women's artistic teams to Rio 2016, in addition to securing two women's places for the trampoline event
- 38 international and national events staged;
- During the recently held 2015 World Championships in Glasgow, BBC coverage generated impressive nightly viewing figures for the broadcaster;
- Increasing its fan base with more than 230,000 social media followers and achieving over 9 million video views over its social media networks.
